

PARENT INFORMATION MEETING:

Working together on strategic school design building blocks

SCHOOL SUCCESS BY DESIGN

When: Monday, March 10, 2014 5:00-6:00 p.m.

Where: Barnette Elementary School, Media Ctr

Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools, in collaboration with three partners: The Belk Foundation, Education Resource Strategies (ERS) and Public Impact, are working at developing and expanding an innovative model to financially reward and strategically place top teachers and resources in order to extend the reach of excellence to all students. This "Success by Design" model intends to strategically use people, time, technology and money to increase student achievement. The new school designs for CMS will prioritize teaching effectiveness, target individual student attention, maximize time for learning and selectively invest in non-instructional support for students.

Were you able to follow that?

We've heard it on the news and read about it in the papers, but what does it all mean? Please join us this Monday when Barnette's Administration and Staff will be on hand to introduce us to this new "Opportunity Culture".

Barnette is one of 17 schools selected to design and integrate these models starting with the 2014-2015 school year. A big part of this whole process is understanding what our school, our learners and our community needs best to succeed. This is not intended as a cookie cutter approach but something specific to Barnette. This is an extremely exciting time for our community and an honor to be chosen but in order to best take advantage of this opportunity, your input is crucial! Please make plans to

"We want every school in our district to be a place where great learning and great teaching can take place," said Dr. Heath E. Morrison, superintendent.
"These models will help us achieve both goals ... allow our most accomplished teachers to help their colleagues and also reach more students...."
